Memory

The brain is a place where we keep information and memories. We use them whenever we need them. But, sometimes it is difficult for us to remember certain things. The question is, what affects memory and what makes us forget?

Memory differs from person to person. Some people remember faces well but don't remember numbers. Some people remember important historical dates. Others remember information related to their profession but don't remember their partner's birthday.

There are situations that affect memory or forgetfulness. For example, our memory does not work very well when we are in a state of worry or stress. However, when we are relaxed our memory starts working again. It is well known that age might have a serious effect on memory. Who knows, maybe in the future the solution to this problem will be just a matter of pressing a button ...
