MARK SCHEME

Maximum Mark: 80

---

Published

This mark scheme is published as an aid to teachers and candidates, to indicate the requirements of the examination. It shows the basis on which Examiners were instructed to award marks. It does not indicate the details of the discussions that took place at an Examiners' meeting before marking began, which would have considered the acceptability of alternative answers.

Mark schemes should be read in conjunction with the question paper and the Principal Examiner Report for Teachers.

Cambridge International will not enter into discussions about these mark schemes.

Cambridge International is publishing the mark schemes for the October/November 2025 series for most Cambridge IGCSE, Cambridge International A and AS Level components, and some Cambridge O Level components.

This document consists of 23 printed pages.

Generic Marking Principles

These general marking principles must be applied by all examiners when marking candidate answers. They should be applied alongside the specific content of the mark scheme or generic level descriptions for a question. Each question paper and mark scheme will also comply with these marking principles.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 1:

Marks must be awarded in line with:

- the specific content of the mark scheme or the generic level descriptors for the question
- the specific skills defined in the mark scheme or in the generic level descriptors for the question
- the standard of response required by a candidate as exemplified by the standardisation scripts.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 2:

Marks awarded are always whole marks (not half marks, or other fractions).

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 3:

Marks must be awarded positively:

- marks are awarded for correct/valid answers, as defined in the mark scheme. However, credit is given for valid answers which go beyond the scope of the syllabus and mark scheme, referring to your Team Leader as appropriate
- marks are awarded when candidates clearly demonstrate what they know and can do
- marks are not deducted for errors
- marks are not deducted for omissions
- answers should only be judged on the quality of spelling, punctuation and grammar when these features are specifically assessed by the question as indicated by the mark scheme. The meaning, however, should be unambiguous.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 4:

Rules must be applied consistently, e.g. in situations where candidates have not followed instructions or in the application of generic level descriptors.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 5:

Marks should be awarded using the full range of marks defined in the mark scheme for the question. (However, the use of the full mark range may be limited according to the quality of the candidate responses seen.)

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 6:

Marks awarded are based solely on the requirements as defined in the mark scheme. Marks should not be awarded with grade thresholds or grade descriptors in mind.

Annotations guidance for centres

Examiners use a system of annotations as a shorthand for communicating their marking decisions to one another. Examiners are trained during the standardisation process on how and when to use annotations. The purpose of annotations is to inform the standardisation and monitoring processes and guide the supervising examiners when they are checking the work of examiners within their team. The meaning of annotations and how they are used is specific to each component and is understood by all examiners who mark the component.

We publish annotations in our mark schemes to help centres understand the annotations they may see on copies of scripts. Note that there may not be a direct correlation between the number of annotations on a script and the mark awarded. Similarly, the use of an annotation may not be an indication of the quality of the response.

The annotations listed below were available to examiners marking this component in this series.

During audiences he usually gives a homily, sharing insights into such matters; he also blesses attendees.</li> <li>• Being in the presence of someone who is believed to be particularly close to God can be a spiritual experience in itself, strengthening faith and enabling people to feel the presence of God in their own lives.</li> </ul>	6

Question	Answer	Marks
1(c)	Discuss whether going on pilgrimage is an important duty for all Christians. You must refer to Christianity in your answer. Your response should consider different points of view when you evaluate the question. Use Table B AO2 Evaluation to mark candidate responses to this question. Answers may include some of the following ideas. Giving different views does not require presenting opposing or contradictory points. All valid material must be credited. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Pilgrimage is not compulsory – that means those choosing to undertake it are going beyond the basic requirements of their religion to offer something more to God.</li> <li>• Pilgrimage means taking time away from everyday life and it might also involve physical hardship. These things not only show a significant commitment to their religious life but could be considered witnessing. Pilgrimage might not be a specific requirement but sharing their faith is and pilgrimage is a means of obeying that command.</li> <li>• It offers Christians opportunities for reflection, penance and self-realisation that might be hard to achieve in other circumstances.</li> <li>• Most pilgrimages are to places of significance in the history of the religion, and this makes pilgrimage an important means of connecting with those events in a personal way.</li> <li>• Something that is not compulsory, like pilgrimage, might be seen as less important than things which are. A Christian who is unable or unwilling to go on a pilgrimage can still be a good Christian in the eyes of God.</li> <li>• It is possible to attain the spiritual benefits associated with pilgrimage in other ways. The Holy Spirit is everywhere, not just at sites of pilgrimage.</li> <li>• Not everyone is able to leave their everyday lives behind for any length of time, and not everyone is physically capable of undertaking a pilgrimage. But everyone is capable of being a good Christian and that is what is really important.</li> </ul>	8

2(c)	Evaluate the importance of using artefacts in worship for different Christian communities. You must refer to Christianity in your answer. Your response should consider different points of view when you evaluate the question. Use Table B AO2 Evaluation to mark candidate responses to this question. Answers may include some of the following ideas. Giving different views does not require presenting opposing or contradictory points. All valid material must be credited. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• The category of artefacts includes the Bible, which is of central importance in Christianity as it is the word of God and reading it can make them feel closer to God. It also contains the history of their faith and instructions about how to practice it.</li> <li>• Artefacts such as the chalice and paten are used in communion by some Christian denominations. Since this is the most important act of Christian worship for these Christians, the artefacts used for it are also likely to be considered important.</li> <li>• Crosses and crucifixes help Christians to remember the sacrifice made by Jesus and the hope that this brings to them, and they are also important symbols of the religion as a whole.</li> <li>• Many Christians believe that a person can focus on God, meditate, pray and keep God always in their hearts and minds without access to any artefacts. They might consider this a better way to worship because there is a risk of idolatry if too much attention is paid to a crucifix or other image.</li> <li>• Jesus told his disciples that he would be present whenever people gathered together in his name, which might imply that the presence of other Christians is more important than anything else.</li> </ul>	8

3(b)	Explain why the Bible might be considered a source of authority. Use Table A AO1 Knowledge and understanding to mark candidate responses to this question. All valid material must be credited. Responses might include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• The Bible contains the teachings of God about how people should behave and what they should believe. Some Christians describe it as the Word of God.</li> <li>• The Bible tells Christians about the history of their religion, including the sacrifice of Jesus to create a new Covenant and save humanity from sin.</li> <li>• The different books of the Bible are believed to have been written by people who had direct experiences of God and Jesus.</li> <li>• Although the final composition of the Bible was not completed until the fourth century CE many Christians believe the Holy Spirit guided the church authorities in that process, ensuring that only the words God wished would be included in the final canon.</li> </ul>	6

Question	Answer	Marks
3(c)	Discuss the significance of the restrictions in the Ten Commandments for Christian life. You must refer to Christianity in your answer. Your response should consider different points of view when you evaluate the question. Use Table B AO2 Evaluation to mark candidate responses to this question. Answers may include some of the following ideas. Giving different views does not require presenting opposing or contradictory points. All valid material must be credited. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Religious rules and commandments can be either restrictions/prohibitions or instructions/requirements. Restrictions might be broader in scope or simpler to understand than instructions, e.g. being forbidden to worship idols is a simpler statement than trying to list all permissible forms of worship.</li> <li>• Any community has to have some restrictions on behaviour that would be detrimental to other people. Commandments against stealing, lying, adultery and murder all help to ensure society is safe and peaceful, which is what God wants.</li> <li>• There are more restrictions than there are instructions: eight out of the ten take the form 'Thou shalt not...'. This could be said to imply that there are more things it is necessary to avoid.</li> <li>• Jesus specified that there were two Great Commandments, which were more important than any others including the Ten Commandments and which can also be said to encompass all the requirements of the Ten Commandments. Both are positive instructions to love God and one another - rather than restrictions on behaviour.</li> <li>• For someone who is focused on God and being a good Christian, knowing what is not going to contribute to that is unlikely to feel like a restriction, regardless of how it is phrased.</li> <li>• All the Commandments come from God and are therefore all equally important.</li> </ul>	8

4(b)	Explain why dhikr might be a significant devotional practice for Muslims. Use Table A AO1 Knowledge and understanding to mark candidate responses to this question. Answers may include some of the following ideas. All valid material must be credited. Responses might include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Dhikr is the remembrance of God by repeating the names of God or phrases such as 'God is greatest' or 'there is no God but Allah'. Such recitations are a central practice in Sufi Islam.</li> <li>• The practice arises from verses in the Qur'an which remind Muslims to constantly remember the will of God, for example Surah al-Ahzab, ayah 41, tells Muslims "O you who believe, remember God often!" The Qur'an is the words of God so following the instructions it gives is important.</li> <li>• Dhikr helps Muslims resist the temptations of Shaytan and so protects them from wrongdoing and the associated punishments. It is also sometimes described as the best of all deeds.</li> <li>• Dhikr helps Muslims to know God, drawing them nearer to God's presence.</li> </ul>	6

All valid material must be credited. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• The imam leads the prayers, standing in front of the other worshippers and reciting the appropriate prayers at the appropriate times; they are therefore a guide to other worshippers on how pray correctly.</li> <li>• Many imams also take on wider roles in the community, offering advice and guidance, helping to educate young Muslims and officiating at marriages.</li> <li>• The imam is especially important during Jummah (Friday) prayers as it is the imam who gives the sermon.</li> <li>• Muslims in the Shi'ah tradition give the title of imam only to those descendants of the family of the Prophet (pbuh) who are believed to have been chosen by God to be examples to the faithful</li> <li>• Islam does not require clergy in the sense of believing that an ordained or special person is needed as an intercessor for other people. All Muslims can communicate directly with God and anyone who is able to can be selected to lead prayers.</li> <li>• The role of the imam does not have to be performed by the same person every time, and salah prayers do not require the presence of an imam to be acceptable to God.</li> <li>• The mu'azzin, an official who calls Muslims to prayer, might be considered more essential for the mosque than a dedicated imam as without them the call to prayer will not be heard.</li> </ul>	8

A person who holds these beliefs and makes this declaration is a Muslim.</li> <li>• The Shahadah forms part of the adhan (call to prayer) and it is repeated as part of salah prayer.</li> <li>• There is a tradition of making the Shahadah the first words heard by a newborn baby and also the last words heard and/or said by a dying person.</li> <li>• While the beliefs stated in the Shahadah are the foundation of the religion the Shahadah is only one of the five pillars. Believing the statement is only one part of being a good Muslim; actions are at least as important.</li> <li>• The Shahadah is part of salah prayers, but it could be argued that it is the prayers themselves that are the most important thing; simply reciting the Shahadah would not be an acceptable substitute for performing salah.</li> <li>• While making a public declaration of faith is something done by new Muslims to mark their joining the ummah it is not a compulsory rite of passage. God knows what is in the heart of an individual and whether they believe in the Articles of Faith.</li> </ul>	8

It is possible to remember things in the wrong way.</li> <li>• Remembering atrocities in too much detail might frighten people and/or make them more aggressive, contributing to ongoing violence and even war.</li> <li>• While agreeing that the events of the Holocaust should not be forgotten, many Jews might rather focus on hope and the promises for the future inherent in the Covenant.</li> </ul>	8

For many contemporary Jews these commandments relate to specific items worn for prayer which are important because Jews were commanded to wear them by G-d.</li> <li>• Items of ritual dress such as tallit and tefillin are used by both Orthodox and Reform Jews, suggesting a universal importance.</li> <li>• Permitting women to wear ritual dress is one of the important differences between Orthodox and Reform Judaism. The desire of women to be able to wear items traditionally reserved for men suggests that some people consider wearing ritual dress to be an important element of fully practicing their religion.</li> <li>• In Orthodox communities, ritual dress such as the tallit and tefillin are worn only by adult men, but since women and children still attend services ritual dress is clearly not a universal requirement for worship.</li> <li>• Some items of ritual dress are only worn on some occasions, for example the kittel is only worn at Passover in most traditions.</li> <li>• Ritual dress might help fulfil a commandment without actually being one itself. For example, the kippah/yarmulke (skull cap) fulfils the requirement for heads to be covered during worship, but the form of head-covering is traditional rather than specified in the Torah.</li> </ul>	8

Answers may include some of the following ideas. Giving different views does not require presenting opposing or contradictory points. All valid material must be credited. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Belief in G-d is one of the central mitzvot and Jews live their lives according to the commandments G-d has given them. If G-d were not considered just, it might be more challenging to justify or maintain the level of commitment and dedication required by these mitzvot.</li> <li>• The idea of justice is inherent in the fact that all the mitzvot except four can, and in fact must, be broken if a life can be saved thereby (pikuach nefesh). Jews must understand this quality in order to obey this mitzvah</li> <li>• The Covenant with G-d makes the Jews G-d's Chosen People and they are also intended to be a light unto the nations, exemplifying the nature of G-d through the way they act towards other people.</li> <li>• Most of the mitzvot relating to social justice can be acted upon without thinking about what beliefs might underlie them: for example, giving to charity does not require belief in any kind of G-d. However, the idea that acting justly is virtuous can impact behaviour without conscious reflection on where such an idea comes from.</li> <li>• Traditionally Judaism does not have a concept of heaven or hell, and forgiveness can only be given by the one who has been wronged. This makes justice an important human quality but the nature of G-d a less immediate concern.</li> </ul>	8
