3 Translate into Spanish.

My father worked as a car mechanic for twenty years, but unfortunately lost his job six months ago when the garage closed. He misses his colleagues but enjoys being at home, and is always busy with lots of old and new interests.

When he was working he did not have time to learn a lot about computers. He has now completed a course at college and is hoping to study information technology at a higher level.

My father has impressed the whole family because he has set up his own website, which combines his new skills with those he had already. He offers help to people who are having problems when trying to repair their cars. Dad can explain how to do the task and has made lots of new friends with people who love cars too.

This is such a large part of his life now that it is possible that it may become a new business for him. He gets more questions every day and some car companies want to pay him for putting adverts for their products on his site. We are proud of him!
