The two older children were always irritated with their younger brother. He used the computer that they shared for their studies for playing games and he often left his things lying around all over the desk. One evening, while playing a computer game, he spilt tea over the computer keyboard accidentally. It took the three of them a long time to clean the desk and wipe down the keyboard. The eldest child's notes for his schoolwork was unreadable. He had to rush his schoolwork for the next day. He only finished it in the morning before going to school. When he pressed the button to print it out, the printer beside the desk made a strange noise. Looking down he saw that there was tea on the printing paper and below the printer. He shouted at his younger brother as he realised that he would not be handing in his homework on time.
