Part 3: Translation

Translate the following passage into Urdu (20 marks).

The domestication of animals was one of the most important stages in human history. When we think of man's best friend, many people will think of the dog. It's probably better to think of humans as dogs' best friends. Scientists now think that dogs became close to people because they could get free food and a home. In return for this the dogs could help protect humans from other wild animals.

However, many people now think that the most useful relationship has been between men and camels. Camels have been used for thousands of years and they can carry heavier loads than elephants! They can travel up to fifty kilometres a day in an extremely hot and dry climate. Despite what most people think, the camel's hump contains fat, not water. But the most amazing thing is their ability to travel long distances without food and water. They can also close their ears and noses to stop the sand getting in. How did humans survive in deserts without them?
