Social equality in society is important. It gives everyone equal rights. It helps to ensure everyone is treated fairly and have equal opportunities. This helps to make everyone feel included in society and reduces discrimination against minority groups.

In some countries social inequality can lead to conflict between opposing groups. This has a damaging affect on families. Family members may be injured or killed, families may become homeless. Children and young people often experience or witness terrible violence. This can affect their mental health.

Human rights help to ensure social equality in society. Non-Governmental Organisations (NGOs) help to safeguard human rights around the world. NGOs highlight and try to prevent human rights abuse and lobby governments to protect human rights. However, limited resources and the scale of human rights abuse means that this is still a major problem in many countries.
