MARK SCHEME

General Marking Instructions

Introduction

Mark schemes are intended to ensure that the GCSE examinations are marked consistently and fairly. The mark schemes provide markers with an indication of the nature and range of candidates' responses likely to be worthy of credit. They also set out the criteria that they should apply in allocating marks to the candidates' responses.

The mark schemes should be read in conjunction with these general marking instructions.

Assessment objectives

Below are the assessment objectives (AO) for GCSE Learning for Life and Work.

Candidates must:

- demonstrate their knowledge and understanding of Learning for Life and Work (AO1);
- apply their knowledge and understanding of Learning for Life and Work (AO2); and
- investigate, analyse, select, present and evaluate information related to Learning for Life and Work (AO3).

Quality of candidates' responses

In marking the examination papers, examiners should be looking for a quality response reflecting the level of maturity which may reasonably be expected of a 16-year-old which is the age at which the majority of candidates sit their GCSE examinations.

Flexibility in marking

Mark schemes are not intended to be totally prescriptive. No mark scheme can cover all the responses which candidates may produce. In the event of unanticipated answers, examiners are expected to use their professional judgement to assess the validity of answers. If an answer is particularly problematic, then examiners should seek the guidance of the Supervising Examiner.

Positive marking

Examiners are encouraged to be positive in their markings giving appropriate credit for what candidates know, understand and can do rather than penalising candidates for errors or omissions. Examiners should make use of the whole of the available mark range for any particular question and be prepared to award full marks for a response which is as good as might reasonably be expected of a 16-year-old GCSE candidate.

Awarding zero marks

Marks should only be awarded for valid responses and no marks should be awarded for an answer which is completely incorrect or inappropriate.

Types of mark scheme

Mark schemes for tasks or questions which require candidates to respond in extended written form are marked on the basis of levels of response which take account of the quality of written communication.

Other questions which require only short answers are marked on a point for point basis with marks awarded for each valid piece of information provided.

Levels of response

Tasks and questions requiring candidates to respond in extended writing are marked in terms of levels of response. In deciding which level of response to award, examiners should look for the "best fit" bearing in mind that weakness in one area may be compensated for by strength in another.

In deciding which mark within a particular level to award to any response, examiners are expected to use their professional judgement. The following guidance is provided to assist examiners.

- Threshold performance: Response which just merits inclusion in the level and should be awarded a mark at or near the bottom of the range.
- Intermediate performance: Response which clearly merits inclusion and should be awarded a mark at or near the middle of the range.
- High performance: Response which fully satisfies the level description and should be awarded a mark at or near the top of the range.

Quality of written communication

Quality of written communication is taken into account in assessing candidates' responses to all tasks and questions that require them to respond in extended written form. These tasks and questions are marked on the basis of levels of response. The description for each level of response includes reference to the quality of written communication.

For conciseness, quality of written communication is distinguished within levels of response as follows:

Level 1: Quality of written response is limited.

Level 2: Quality of written response is appropriate.

Level 3: Quality of written response is of a high standard.

In interpreting these level descriptions, examiners should refer to the more detailed guidance provided below:

[0] marks – will be awarded if the response is not worthy of credit.

AO1

Level 1 (Limited): The candidate's knowledge and understanding of the content is limited. The organisation and presentation of material may sometimes lack clarity and/or coherence. The use of specialist vocabulary is limited or inappropriately used. Spelling, punctuation and grammar may contain a number of inaccuracies and be such that intended meaning is not always clear.

Level 2 (Appropriate): The candidate's knowledge and understanding of the content is generally appropriate. Relevant material is organised appropriately and presented with sufficient clarity and coherence. There is some use of appropriate specialist vocabulary. Spelling, punctuation and grammar are sufficiently accurate to ensure clarity of meaning.

Level 3 (High): The candidate demonstrates a high level of knowledge and understanding of the content. Relevant material is organised and presented with a very good form and style of writing. There is a high degree of clarity and coherence. Specialist vocabulary is utilised in the relevant contexts and clarity of meaning is ensured through accurate spelling, punctuation and grammar.

AO2

(b) Any two from the following suggested answers:

- unequal distribution of wealth – financial resources and assets are unevenly distributed across the population. A relatively small percentage of people have a greater proportion of wealth compared to the majority of people. People with greater wealth have access to more opportunities than those with less wealth
- unequal levels of income – a significant difference in income between people at the top and bottom levels of income advantages those on higher income and disadvantages those at the lower end of the income scale. People at the bottom end of the income scale have access to fewer opportunities than those at the top
- status/class – some people may hold privileged positions such as, hereditary titles or may have gained a position of high status in society. They can use their position to access opportunities. This advantages them compared to others not in this position
- lack of social mobility – there may be few opportunities for people in lower income/status groups to improve their position in society. This limits their opportunities/life chances
- employment/unemployment – people who are unemployed or in low paid employment have less opportunities than those in well paid jobs. Unemployed people are more likely to be living in poverty
- Govt policy – but must explain how it relates to the above points

Or any suitable alternative

5 Answers may include reference to any of the following:

Positives

- promotes equality – encourages good relations and challenge discrimination through promotion, advice and enforcement
- reduces discrimination – by promoting equality, good practice and educating people about their rights, people can learn to be more understanding and respect others who are different. Therefore, they may be less likely to discriminate against others
- good relations – promotes good relations between people of different racial groups. This can help people from minority racial groups and the local community to better understand each other and reduce tension and discrimination
- research – conducts research helps to identify inequality and discrimination. The research findings inform its policy and its work
- reviews legislation – monitors and reviews legislation and public policies to ensure that they do not breach equality legislation. This helps to safeguard the rights of individuals and minority groups and prevent discrimination
- communicate – provides advice and information to employers and the public about equality and equality legislation
- investigative and enforcement powers – the NIEC can investigate complaints and ensure that employers comply with equality legislation. This helps to ensure discrimination is reduced
- education – supports schools and youth groups to learn about equality through its educational activities. This may help young people to reflect on their views and reduce prejudice and discrimination

Negatives

- limited funding – inadequate funding limits the work it can do to promote equality therefore the outcomes and success of projects will be limited
- equality ignored – people may be aware of the importance of equality but may still remain prejudiced and discriminate against certain groups in society
- non-compliance with legislation – employers may ignore equality legislation or not fully comply with legislation. People may still be discriminated against in the work place
- limited impact on promoting good relations – its work on promoting good relations between different minority groups in society may be limited to the relatively small numbers of groups it can work with
- limited impact of research – the research undertaken by the NIEC may have limited impact on policy unless politicians are willing to act on it

- government may ignore its advice - the NIECs review of legislation makes recommendations to the Northern Ireland government on improving equality legislation. The government may not accept all of the recommendations
- limited impact of investigations and enforcement powers – may not have the resources to make a significant impact on reducing discrimination because of the scale of issue
- limited impact of education – people might not be interested in learning about discrimination and equality. People’s prejudice towards others from minority groups may remain unchanged

Or any suitable alternative
