Success and pressure

Many young people experience success in school which helps to improve their self-confidence. For example sports clubs, being voted onto a students' council or examination success can make a young person feel good about themselves.

Young people in school may experience pressures such as bullying which may cause them to feel very unhappy in school. A form of bullying is by text messaging. It is important for a young person to talk to a friend, parent or teacher in dealing with text bullying.

Young people may experience pressure from the media such as television and magazines. Celebrities from sport, music and television may have an image which may encourage a young person to diet. There are many dangers of dieting such as developing an eating disorder which may affect a young person's health.
