The World of Work

It is important for students to know what happens at interviews, so teachers sometimes arrange Interview Skills Days in school.

If an applicant is successful with their job application, they will realise that employers value competencies and personal qualities in their employees.

It is usual for employees to join a trade union when they start work. Whilst trade unions provide many benefits for the employees, they can also cause the employee to feel that being a member does not always necessarily mean that they are getting value for money with their membership.
