SAMPLE MARK SCHEME

Duration: 2 hours

MAXIMUM MARK 80

This document consists of 28 pages

Guidance on applying the marking grids for set text translation

The general principle in assessing each section should be the proportion (out of 5) of sense achieved.

One approach for each section is given. Acceptable alternatives will be illustrated during Standardisation, but examiners should assess on its own merits any approach that satisfactorily conveys the meaning of the Greek – the crucial consideration being the extent to which every Greek word is satisfactorily rendered in some way in the English.

The determination of what a "slight" error is only necessary when it is the only error in a section; this distinction will then determine whether a mark of 5 or 4 is appropriate. Where marks of 4, 3, 2, 1 and 0 are applicable, the overall proportion of meaning conveyed in the section is the only consideration. The term "major" error has been used here to determine an error which is more serious than a "slight" error.

The classification below should be seen only as a general guide, the intention of which is to maintain standards year-on-year. Lead markers should consider each instance on its own merits in the context of the passage and the section.

The sort of errors that we would generally expect to be considered as a "slight" error are:

- a single mistake in the translation of a verb, for example incorrect person or tense;
- vocabulary errors that do not substantially alter the meaning
- omission of particles that does not substantially alter the meaning (although in certain cases the omission of a particle may not count as an error at all, most especially with μεν... δε)

The sort of errors that we would generally expect to be considered as a "major" error are:

- more than one slight error in any one verb
- vocabulary errors that substantially alter the meaning
- omission of a word or words, including alteration of active to passive if the agent is not expressed
- missed constructions
- alteration in word order that affects the sense

The final decisions on what constitutes a "slight" and "major" error will be made and communicated to assessors via the standardisation process (after full consideration of candidates' responses) and these decisions will be captured in the final mark scheme for examiners and centres.

Marks	Description
5	Accurate translation with one slight error allowed
4	Mostly correct
3	More than half right
2	Less than half right
1	Little recognisable relation or meaning to the Greek

0 = No response or no response worthy of credit.

Guidance on applying the marking grids for the 10-mark extended response question

Two Assessment Objectives are being assessed in Questions 1(i), 2(i), 3(g) and 4(i) - AO2 (Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of literature) and AO3 (Critically analyse, evaluate and respond to literature). The two Assessment Objectives are equally weighted.

Examiners must use a best fit approach to the marking grid. Where there are both strengths and weaknesses in a particular response, particularly imbalanced responses in terms of the assessment objectives, examiners must carefully consider which level is the best fit for the performance overall. For example, you should not be able to achieve a mark of 8 made up of AO2 = 6 and AO3 = 2.

Responses are credited for AO2 for the detail and accuracy of the knowledge of the set text they deploy and for their understanding of the set text as well as the social, historic and cultural context for the set text. For the highest level, candidates are expected, where relevant, to bring in knowledge and understanding from the material they have read in English.

Responses are credited for AO3 for how well the response addresses the question, for candidates selecting relevant examples from the set texts they have studied and drawing and expressing conclusions based on the selected examples in relation to the question posed. Candidates will be assessed on the quality of the conclusions and points they argue and the range and quality of the examples they have selected.

5	9–10	 detailed knowledge and excellent understanding of the material studied in Greek including, where appropriate, the social, cultural and historic context and, where relevant, material studied in translation (AO2) well-argued response to the question which is supported by a range of well-selected examples (AO3) The response is logically structured, with a well-developed, sustained and coherent line of reasoning.
4	7–8	 good knowledge and sound understanding of the material studied including, where appropriate, the social, cultural and historic context (AO2) a good response to the question which is supported by some well-selected examples (AO3) The response is logically structured, with a well-developed and clear line of reasoning.

3	5–6	 some knowledge and understanding of the material studied including, where appropriate, the social, cultural and historic context (AO2) a reasonable response to the question which is supported by some points from the set text (AO3) The response presents a line of reasoning which is mostly relevant and has some structure.
2	3–4	 limited knowledge and understanding of the material studied including, where appropriate, the social, cultural and historic context (AO2) a limited response to the question which is occasionally supported by reference to the set text (AO3) The response presents a line of reasoning but may lack structure.
1	1–2	 very limited knowledge and understanding of the material studied including, where appropriate, the social, cultural and historic context (AO2) a very limited response to the question with very limited reference to the set text (AO3) The information is communicated in an unstructured way.

	Candidates are likely to argue that Lysander does come across as a strong Spartan leader pointing towards his victory over the Athenians as evidence of military prowess. They may also discuss how "Spartan" his attitude toward things such as wealth and trade was.
	Some candidates may construct a more nuanced argument looking at whether Lysander was a strong leader by anyone's standards, or whether his particular prowess/strengths are those which would be appreciated by the Spartans alone.
	 Supporting evidence may include (AO2): origins in poverty his unusual temperament his odd relationship with money and the change in the Spartan attitude towards wealth in the context of our (possibly biased) other sources for Spartan attitudes the apparent hypocrisy over the Sicilian tunics Spartan confidence in appointing Lysander to take on Alcibiades his effective actions to stimulate trade at Ephesus his persuading of Cyrus to pay the sailors better (and the resulting exodus of sailors from enemy ships), perhaps demonstrating knowledge of the context of the complexities of staffing an army/navy in a cosmopolitan society the victory at Ephesus his clever sowing of discontent in the context of a society where reputation rests upon clever management of a large population with low literacy and slow communication his (deliberate or otherwise) undermining of Callicratidas, especially regarding the Persian money, and leaving Callicratidas stranded

	It is likely that students will make reference to the fact that particular actions of the suitors, such as their disregard for the conventions of xenia , would have been particularly negative in the eyes of Homer's contemporary audience. Some students may draw out the fact that because a modern audience doesn't always hold the same values we may respond differently to the portrayal.
	Some students may defend the suitors, pointing out that Ithaca needs a male authority figure in the absence of Odysseus, as Telemachus is too young and Penelope a woman. The suitors are, fundamentally, simply taking advantage of a power vacuum. If Penelope had done as expected and taken a new husband, this issue would have been solved. Also their revilement of Odysseus is, in context, understandable as they believe him to be a poor beggar, not an important man.
	Supporting evidence may include (AO2):
	 Antinous: complacent (about the festival day, and the axes) gluttonous: asking for Melanthius's best goats, large amounts of wine swift to anger when Odysseus asks to string the bow Antinous: insults Odysseus in detail implying Odysseus should not be given an equal share of food, nor be allowed to hear their conversation

4 (i)*	 'Oedipus is consistently passionate in his reactions, and therefore a consistently understandable character.' Is this a fair description of Oedipus in the lines that you have read? Assess against criteria in the 10-mark essay grid (see above). Arguments may include (AO3): There is no "right answer": many of Oedipus's reactions can be interpreted as passionate, but at times he is cautious, measured or intellectual. Marking focus should be on how competently the response gathers and interprets evidence from the text, rather than whether the examiner agrees with the conclusion. Candidates are likely to argue that Oedipus is a passionate figure at least for part of the text. It is likely, however, that the word "consistently" will be unpacked, with some arguing that rather than passion being his response all the time, other emotions and sentiments characterize some of his actions/responses. Others might argue that in fact all of his responses can be considered "passionate" (albeit perhaps in different ways) and so would agree with the statement. The degree to which Oedipus is "understandable" should also be explored. Candidates may have different views on what "understandable" means in this context; predictable, acceptable, coherent etc. It is likely that they will discuss the different reactions of an ancient and modern audience to a "passionate" figure such as Oedipus; due to the different attitudes and expectations of each. 	10 made up of AO2 = 5 & AO3 = 5	An AO2 heavy response may focus on details from the set texts but not draw many valid conclusions. 	Supporting evidence may include (AO2):
	 With Teiresias: responds with concern to Teiresias's negative opening interprets Teiresias's reticence as unpatriotic (on the assumption that Teiresias's advice will help Thebes) swiftly moves to insults, though only once Teirisias has pledged silence but continues to try to persuade Teiresias to help Thebes suddenly accuses Teiresias of planning the assassination, without evidence does not even briefly consider that Teiresias's accusation against him might be true insults Teiresias's ability as a prophet, and makes comparison with his own ability to solve the Sphinx's riddle again without evidence or prompting, moves to accuse Creon insults Teiresias for his disabilities, simultaneously making a veiled physical threat
	 With Jocasta: at first, persists in his accusations of Creon and Teiresias pays attention to the memories that Jocasta's speech inspires, and pursues the details rapidly turns to concern, despite the minimal evidence against him (e.g. the physical description of Laius: not exactly detailed) immediately sends for the servant to interrogate him keeps quiet about his suspicions until he can find out more
	All points may be discussed in the context of a society that places high value on the sayings of prophets and oracles, and treats them with respect; and also with awareness of the vague/contradictory nature of oracles and the doubts that may therefore arise. Discussion may also be helped by reference to the 'historical' events that led to Oedipus becoming King of Thebes, and the nature of ancient monarchy and society.

Question	Answer	Marks	Guidance
	Knowledge of the Greek expectations of a leader and likely audience response to Oedipus' passionate outbursts will also be likely inclusions.
