SECTION A – Commentary Questions

Answer either Question 1 or Question 2.

1 Read the passage and answer the questions.

Come now, Erato, and I shall tell of the kings of ancient Latium, of its history, of the state of this land when first the army of strangers beached their ships on the shores of Ausonia. I shall recall too, the cause of the first battle – come, goddess, come and instruct your prophet. I shall speak of fearsome fighting, I shall speak of wars and of kings driven into the ways of death by their pride of spirit, of a band of fighting men from Etruria and the whole land of Hesperia under arms. For me this is the birth of a higher order of things. This is a greater work I now set in motion.

King Latinus was by this time an old man and he had reigned over the countryside and the cities for many peaceful years. We are told that he was the son of Faunus and the Laurentine nymph Marica. The father of Faunus was Picus, and the father claimed by Picus was Saturn. Saturn then was the first founder of the line. By divine Fate Latinus had no male offspring. His son had been snatched from him as he was rising into the first bloom of his youth. An only daughter tended his home and preserved the succession for this great palace. She was now grown to womanhood and at the age for marriage and many were seeking her hand from great Latium and the whole of Ausonia, Turnus the handsomest of them all, his claim supported by the long line of his forbears. The queen Amata longed above all things to see him married to her daughter, but many frightening portents from the gods forbade it.

Virgil, Aeneid Book 7 40–58

- (a) 'This is a greater work I now set in motion' (lines 9–10). How far do you agree that the second half of the Aeneid is superior to the first half of the epic? [25]
- (b) 'Goddesses and women always oppose Aeneas and Roman destiny.' To what extent is this true of the books of the Aeneid you have studied? [25]

Do not answer this question if you have already answered Question 1.

2 Read the passages and answer the questions.

PASSAGE 1

So he spoke, and steadying his long-shadowed spear he let it fly, and did not miss, hitting in the centre of the son of Peleus' shield:
but the spear rebounded far from the shield. Hektor was angered that his swift spear had flown wasted from his hand, and stood there in dismay, as he had no second ash spear. He called in a great shout 5 to Deïphobos of the white shield, and asked him for a long spear.
But Deïphobos was not there near him. Then Hektor realised in his heart, and cried out: 'Oh, for sure now the gods have called me to my death! I thought the hero Deïphobos was with me: but he is inside the wall, and Athene has tricked me. So now vile death is 10 close on me, not far now any longer, and there is no escape. This must long have been the true pleasure of Zeus and Zeus' son the far-shooter, and yet before now they readily defended me: but now this time my fate has caught me. Even so, let me not die ingloriously, without a fight, without some great deed done that future men will 15 hear of.'

Homer, Iliad Book 22 290–305

PASSAGE 2

Item removed due to third party copyright restrictions.

Virgil, Aeneid Book 12 854–886

- (a) How successfully does Virgil make Passage 2 a moving piece of writing? [25]
- (b) For whom do you feel the greater sympathy, Hektor or Turnus? In your answer, you should use these passages and the books of the Iliad and Aeneid you have studied. [25]

[Section A Total: 50]

SECTION B – Essays

Answer one question.

Start your answer on a new page.

- 3 ‘A totally detestable hero who is too dependent and thoroughly demoralised.’
How far do you agree with this assessment of Aeneas? [50]
- 4 ‘A poem which praises peace and condemns war.’
Is this statement more true of the Iliad or of the Aeneid? [50]
