The Carthaginians have besieged Casilinum through the winter but failed to achieve the surrender of the town. A Roman relief force, though not strong enough to force its way into the town, finds another method to support their allies who are trapped inside.

By now the lengthy siege had reduced the citizens to an extreme level of deprivation.

alii non tolerantes famem se a muris praecipitabant, alii nuda corpora ad ictus telorum praebebant. copiis Romanis praeerat Gracchus. hic, quamquam ea quae ab urbe nuntiabantur omnem patientiam vincebant, nihil movebat. nam cibi importandi sine pugna spes non erat.

When King Acrisius learned that Perseus was returning home, he was terrified: for he remembered the oracle which had foretold that he would be killed by his own grandson¹. Afraid to stay in Argos any longer, he went away secretly to the city of Larissa.

A few days later Perseus' ship was driven off course by a storm and by chance he was also carried to Larissa. There he found the people celebrating the sacred games, in which they persuaded him to compete. Perseus delighted the spectators by throwing the discus² further than any of the other young men, but as it descended it was carried into the crowd by the wind, striking King Acrisius and killing him instantly. Perseus was shocked to discover that he had killed his grandfather³, of whose presence in the city he knew nothing.
