25 Study Fig. 25 and answer Questions 25(a) and 25(b).

Devolution for north-east England

In 2017, the government decided to support a devolution deal for three local authorities north of the River Tyne (Newcastle, North Tyneside and Northumberland).

The new Combined Authority would gain an extra £20 million each year in government grants. An elected 'metro-mayor' would lead the Combined Authority.

The Combined Authority would have some additional power devolved from central government.

Towns and cities south of the River Tyne were left out of the plan, even though most people see these places as part of the north-east region.

In a 2004 referendum, people in north-east England voted strongly against a plan for devolution of power from London. The government has no plans to hold another referendum. It will be councilors in the three local authorities who will decide whether to approve the government's plan.

34 Study Fig. 34 and answer Questions 34(a) and 34(b).

Improving the UK's seaside towns

A House of Lords report published in April 2019 found that many seaside towns were in desperate need of improvements to transport, housing and broadband.

The Lords found that young people in seaside towns often lacked ambition and needed better access to further and higher education.

They argued that many seaside towns such as Hastings, Blackpool and Great Yarmouth had been 'left behind'. Many people felt isolated, lived from 'day to day' and had lost faith in UK politics.

35 Study Fig. 35 and answer the question that follows.

Brunei brings in new laws

Brunei is a Commonwealth country in south-east Asia. In 2019, new laws were introduced that led to protests in the UK and around the world.

These new laws meant that people having gay sex and people caught having sex with other people's partners could be stoned to death. Brunei's laws also enable courts to order that thieves have one of their hands cut off.

Celebrities, including the actor George Clooney, encouraged people around the world to protest by not buying any products or services connected with Brunei.

Fig. 35

Identify two legal and practical actions the UK government can take in the case described in Fig. 35.

- A expel Brunei from the Commonwealth
- B apply trade sanctions to Brunei
- C overthrow the Brunei government by supporting opposition groups
- D expel all Brunei citizens living in the UK
- E propose a resolution to be debated by the UN
- F use International Humanitarian Law to prosecute the Brunei government
