Mark Scheme for June 2017

OCR (Oxford Cambridge and RSA) is a leading UK awarding body, providing a wide range of qualifications to meet the needs of candidates of all ages and abilities. OCR qualifications include AS/A Levels, Diplomas, GCSEs, Cambridge Nationals, Cambridge Technicals, Functional Skills, Key Skills, Entry Level qualifications, NVQs and vocational qualifications in areas such as IT, business, languages, teaching/training, administration and secretarial skills.

It is also responsible for developing new specifications to meet national requirements and the needs of students and teachers. OCR is a not-for-profit organisation; any surplus made is invested back into the establishment to help towards the development of qualifications and support, which keep pace with the changing needs of today's society.

This mark scheme is published as an aid to teachers and students, to indicate the requirements of the examination. It shows the basis on which marks were awarded by examiners. It does not indicate the details of the discussions which took place at an examiners' meeting before marking commenced.

All examiners are instructed that alternative correct answers and unexpected approaches in candidates' scripts must be given marks that fairly reflect the relevant knowledge and skills demonstrated.

Mark schemes should be read in conjunction with the published question papers and the report on the examination.

OCR will not enter into any discussion or correspondence in connection with this mark scheme.

Subject-specific Marking Instructions

INTRODUCTION

Your first task as an Examiner is to become thoroughly familiar with the material on which the examination depends. This material includes:

- the specification, especially the assessment objectives
- the question paper and its rubrics
- the unseen texts
- the mark scheme.

You should ensure that you have copies of these materials.

You should ensure also that you are familiar with the administrative procedures related to the marking process. These are set out in the OCR booklet Instructions for Examiners. If you are examining for the first time, please read carefully Appendix 5 Introduction to Script Marking: Notes for New Examiners.

Please ask for help or guidance whenever you need it. Your first point of contact is your Team Leader.

Rubric Infringement

Candidates may infringe the rubric in the following way:

- answering two questions from Section B.

If a candidate has written two answers for Section B, mark both answers and award the highest mark achieved.

ASSESSMENT OBJECTIVES

Candidates are expected to demonstrate the following in the context of the content described:

AO1	Identify and interpret explicit and implicit information and ideas. Select and synthesise evidence from different texts.
AO2	Explain, comment on and analyse how writers use language and structure to achieve effects and influence readers, using relevant subject terminology to support their views.
AO3	Compare writers' ideas and perspectives, as well as how these are conveyed, across two or more texts.
AO4	Evaluate texts critically and support this with appropriate textual references.
AO5	Communicate clearly, effectively and imaginatively, selecting and adapting tone, style and register for different forms, purposes and audiences. Organise information and ideas, using structural and grammatical features to support coherence and cohesion of texts.
AO6	Candidates must use a range of vocabulary and sentence structures for clarity, purpose and effect, with accurate spelling and punctuation.

WEIGHTING OF ASSESSMENT OBJECTIVES

The relationship between the components and the assessment objectives of the scheme of assessment is shown in the following grid:

	AO1	AO2	AO3	AO4	AO5	AO6	Total
J351/01 Communicating Information and Ideas	6.25	7.5	3.75	7.5	15	10	50%
J351/02 Exploring Effects and Impact	2.5	11.25	3.75	7.5	15	10	50%
Total	8.75	18.75	7.5	15	30	20	100%

USING THE MARK SCHEME

Please study this Mark Scheme carefully. The Mark Scheme is an integral part of the process that begins with the setting of the question paper and ends with the awarding of grades. Question papers and Mark Schemes are developed in association with each other so that issues of differentiation and positive achievement can be addressed from the very start.

This Mark Scheme is a working document; it is not exhaustive; it does not provide 'correct' answers. The Mark Scheme can only provide 'best guesses' about how the question will work out, and it is subject to revision after we have looked at a wide range of scripts.

The Examiners' Standardisation Meeting will ensure that the Mark Scheme covers the range of candidates' responses to the questions, and that all Examiners understand and apply the Mark Scheme in the same way. The Mark Scheme will be discussed and amended at the meeting, and administrative procedures will be confirmed. Co-ordination scripts will be issued at the meeting to exemplify aspects of candidates' responses and achievements; the co-ordination scripts then become part of this Mark Scheme.

Before the Standardisation Meeting, you should read and mark in pencil a number of scripts, in order to gain an impression of the range of responses and achievement that may be expected.

In your marking, you will encounter valid responses which are not covered by the Mark Scheme: these responses must be credited. You will encounter answers which fall outside the 'target range' of Level of Response Bands for the paper which you are marking. Please mark these answers according to the marking criteria.

Please read carefully all the scripts in your allocation and make every effort to look positively for achievement throughout the ability range. Always be prepared to use the full range of marks.

INFORMATION AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXAMINERS

- 1 The co-ordination scripts provide you with examples of the standard of each band. The marks awarded for these scripts will have been agreed by the Team Leaders and will be discussed fully at the Examiners' Co-ordination Meeting.
- 2 The specific task-related notes on each question will help you to understand how the band descriptors may be applied. However, these comments do not constitute the mark scheme. They are some thoughts on what was in the setter's mind when the question was formulated. It is hoped that candidates will respond to questions in a variety of ways and will give original and at times unexpected interpretations of texts. Rigid demands for 'what must be a good answer' would lead to a distorted assessment.
- 3 Candidates' answers must be relevant to the question. Beware of prepared answers that do not show the candidate's thought and which have not been adapted to the thrust of the question. Beware also of answers where candidates attempt to reproduce interpretations and concepts that they have been taught but have only partially understood.
- 4 Candidates' answers should demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the texts. This knowledge will be shown in the range and detail of their references to the text. Re-telling sections of the text without commentary is of little or no value.

INSTRUCTIONS TO EXAMINERS:A INDIVIDUAL ANSWERS

- 1 The indicative content indicates the expected parameters for candidates' answers, but be prepared to recognise and credit unexpected approaches where they show relevance.
- 2 Using 'best-fit', decide first which set of Level of Response Band Descriptors best describes the overall quality of the answer. Once the band is located, adjust the mark concentrating on features of the answer which make it stronger or weaker following the guidelines for refinement.
 - Highest mark: If clear evidence of all the qualities in the band descriptors is shown, the HIGHEST Mark should be awarded.
 - Lowest mark: If the answer shows the candidate to be borderline (i.e. they have achieved all the qualities of the bands below and show limited evidence of meeting the criteria of the band in question) the LOWEST mark should be awarded.
 - Middle mark: This mark should be used for candidates who are secure in the band. They are not 'borderline' but they have only achieved some of the qualities in the band descriptors.
- 3 Be prepared to use the full range of marks. Do not reserve (e.g.) high Level 6 marks 'in case' something turns up of a quality you have not yet seen. If an answer gives clear evidence of the qualities described in the band descriptors, reward appropriately.

He bases this around the example of how the Country Code has been changed. Fun-loving country dwellers are contrasted with “people who have plainly never set foot outside the city”. ○ The paragraph ends with an exaggerated simile comparing the new Countryside Code with “the instruction manual for the space shuttle”. ○ The fourth paragraph contains an extended metaphor (or semantic field) comparing the edicts of the Countryside Code to the rules of a “dictatorship”. ○ The sense of a journey is conveyed structurally in paragraph 4 by the writer starting with you being “marshalled” on to the right path, then seeing the signs “every few hundred yards” and climaxing with the slogans “Kill nothing. Only time.” ○ The images are conveyed structurally by repeating the verb forms “you’re marshalled” and “you’re fenced in” to continue the idea of freedom being restricted. ○ The use of the words “slogans” to describe “Kill nothing. Only time.” reinforces the idea that the countryside resembles a dictatorial regime.

This is conveyed through balanced sentences, e.g. "I go out of the town to forget the town." He takes pleasure in the physical features of the countryside, e.g. "the clear, blue sky and the green turf" and prefers to contemplate its beauty without thinking, e.g. "Is not this wild rose sweet without comment?" • In text B Clarkson contrasts his happy childhood memories of the freedom afforded by the countryside to "climb trees, go where you wanted and fall in stuff" and shows his appreciation by describing its "rolling vastness" as "achingly beautiful". He exaggerates the effect of walking through the countryside in his description of "mud in my navel, my lips were royal blue, my face was fuchsia pink and my hair looked as if it had been through a jet engine". Explain both writers' thoughts and feelings about being free of rules and restrictions in the countryside

		Level 1 (1 mark) <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A response which makes simple points of comparison between writers' ideas and perspectives. 0 marks No response or no response worthy of credit.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Hazlitt feels free to “vegetate” – to spend time doing things that require little effort or thought. He describes his thoughts and memories of town as “encumbrances” or restrictions which prevent him enjoying himself. He is free of the requirements of logic – “antithesis, argument and analysis” – which are presented as restricting his ability to enjoy contemplating the “wild rose” and the “daisy”. He is also aware that his freedom requires solitude as the rules of politeness suggest that abandoning others in the middle of a walk could be seen as a “breach of manners”. He argues that he needs to be free of restrictions to enjoy the countryside to the full. However, he does recognize the limits of freedom by expressing appreciation of talking about the evening meal that awaits him. His appreciation of company is reflected in the shift to the third person plural pronoun “we” in “heightens the flavor of the viands we expect”. • Clarkson suggests that the original Country Code was much better because it had simpler rules that you were free to interpret. He laments the lack of freedom imposed by the revised Countryside Code by exaggerating its restrictions – “as long as the instruction manual for the space shuttle” and compares the atmosphere now created by the Countryside Code to a dictatorship – “looks like a prison camp”. He contrasts the freedom in his childhood to “go where you wanted” to being “marshalled” and “fenced in” by electric barriers. However, he thinks freedom needs to respect the privacy of, for example, the homeowner through whose front garden the allotted pathway is directed. He imagines someone knocking in the sign ‘with special vigour’, and caricatures ‘his mates from the walking club’ as an ‘urban army’. He uses two images to convey his feelings about the lack of freedom in the countryside today: the image of “a bird in a cage” and “a railway train in its tracks”. Using extended metaphors, he feels it is “marshalled” and “colonised” by the rule-makers and no longer free. Candidates may compare these points in response to AO3: Compare how the writers present their ideas about freedom
--	--	--	--

					from rules and restrictions in the countryside <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Hazlitt adopts a much more positive tone to persuade his readers that walking alone in the countryside is joyful. Clarkson adopts an angrier and more sarcastic tone mixed with humour. • Hazlitt writes about social restrictions such as the need to be polite when with others by making small talk whereas Clarkson is more concerned about physical restrictions like walls and fences. • Both writers are argue that their freedom in the countryside is restricted by the rules and restrictions imposed by other people but Hazlitt adopts a much lighter tone than Clarkson. • Both establish their motivation for going to the countryside as a search for an escape, using contrast. Hazlitt writes, “I go out of town in order to forget the town and all that is in it”, whereas Clarkson wants to escape the restrictions of family life: “the children wanted to play Monopoly so, on the basis that anything is better than that, I went for a proper post-roast Sunday afternoon stride”. • The freedom of the countryside is emphasized much more in Hazlitt – “I run, I laugh, I leap, I sing for joy”. Clarkson also uses a list but conveys instead the physical effect on a man unused to walking – “I had mud in my navel, my lips were royal blue, my face was fuchsia pink and my hair looked as if it had been through a jet engine”. • Hazlitt’s use of modifiers suggests a simpler pleasure in the attractions of the countryside: “the clear blue sky over my head, and the green turf beneath my feet”. Clarkson’s enjoyment of the countryside is tinged with sadness by his use of the adverb “achingly” to modify the adjective beautiful”.
--	--	--	--	--	---

					<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Hazlitt presents his pathways as much freer than Clarkson's: "the winding road before me and a three hours' march to dinner." The word "winding" suggests a freedom that Clarkson's pathways lack and "march" may not have had such harsh connotations in the 19th century. Clarkson, on the other hand feels constrained in the country by having to use the paths that have been set by others. When he was younger, he writes, "you could go where you wanted" but now you are "marshalled by signposts" and "fenced in ... by razor wire". • The obligations imposed by other people, by good manners (Hazlitt) and the Countryside Code (Clarkson), are referred to in each passage. Hazlitt keenly feels the harm done to others – "a breach of manners, a neglect of others" – whereas Clarkson happily subverts the suggestion that we should "consider others" when he writes, "Don't openly laugh at the beardy's purple cagoule. Wait until he's passed." • Hazlitt is less insistent that the presence of others is a restriction and allows that discussing what he might eat that evening is "one subject on which it is pleasant to talk on a journey". Clarkson, however, ends as he began with a powerful use of imagery to assert his feeling that his freedom is restricted by rules – "as unable to go your own way as a railway train on its tracks". • Both writers end ironically by expressing happiness about being free of the countryside, Hazlitt by describing an attractive village in the twilight – "some straggling village with the lights streaming through the surrounding gloom" and looking forward to – "entertainment" and "ease" at a sociable inn whereas Clarkson presents the city, perhaps surprisingly, perhaps ironically, as a place that is freer than the countryside for the reasons expressed in the final three part list, "there is no mud, there are more visual diversions and you can go where you want without fear of electrocution". Both use juxtaposition or antithesis to
