Mark Scheme for November 2020

OCR (Oxford Cambridge and RSA) is a leading UK awarding body, providing a wide range of qualifications to meet the needs of candidates of all ages and abilities. OCR qualifications include AS/A Levels, Diplomas, GCSEs, Cambridge Nationals, Cambridge Technicals, Functional Skills, Key Skills, Entry Level qualifications, NVQs and vocational qualifications in areas such as IT, business, languages, teaching/training, administration and secretarial skills.

It is also responsible for developing new specifications to meet national requirements and the needs of students and teachers. OCR is a not-for-profit organisation; any surplus made is invested back into the establishment to help towards the development of qualifications and support, which keep pace with the changing needs of today's society.

This mark scheme is published as an aid to teachers and students, to indicate the requirements of the examination. It shows the basis on which marks were awarded by examiners. It does not indicate the details of the discussions which took place at an examiners' meeting before marking commenced.

All examiners are instructed that alternative correct answers and unexpected approaches in candidates' scripts must be given marks that fairly reflect the relevant knowledge and skills demonstrated.

Mark schemes should be read in conjunction with the published question papers and the report on the examination.

1. Subject-specific Marking Instructions

INTRODUCTION

Your first task as an Examiner is to become thoroughly familiar with the material on which the examination depends. This material includes:

- the specification, especially the assessment objectives
- the question paper and its rubrics
- the mark scheme.

You should ensure that you have copies of these materials.

Please ask for help or guidance whenever you need it. Your first point of contact is your Team Leader.

INFORMATION AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR EXAMINERS

- 1 The practice and standardisation scripts provide you with examples of the standard of each band. The marks awarded for these scripts will have been agreed by the PE and Senior Examiners.
- 2 The specific task-related indicative content for each question will help you to understand how the band descriptors may be applied. However, this indicative content does not constitute the mark scheme: it is material that candidates might use, grouped according to each assessment objective tested by the question. It is hoped that candidates will respond to questions in a variety of ways. Rigid demands for 'what must be a good answer' would lead to a distorted assessment.
- 3 Candidates' answers must be relevant to the question. Beware of seemingly prepared answers that do not show the candidate's thought and which have not been adapted to the thrust of the question. Beware also of answers where candidates attempt to reproduce interpretations and concepts that they have been taught but have only partially understood.

Awarding Spelling, Punctuation and Grammar to scripts with a scribe coversheet

a. If a script has a scribe cover sheet it is vital to check which boxes are ticked and award as per the instructions and grid below:

- Assess the work for SPaG in accordance with the normal marking criteria. The initial assessment must be made as if the candidate had not used a scribe (or word processor) and was eligible for all the SPaG marks.
- Check the cover sheet to see what has been dictated (or what facilities were disabled on the word processor) and therefore what proportion of marks is available to the candidate.
- Convert the SPaG mark to reflect the correct proportion using the conversion table given below.

SPaG mark awarded	Mark if candidate eligible for one third (e.g. grammar only)	Mark if candidate eligible for two thirds (e.g. grammar and punctuation only)

b. If a script has a word processor cover sheet attached to it the candidate can still access SPaG marks (see point a. above) unless the cover sheet states that the checking functionality is enabled, in which case no SPaG marks are available.

c. If a script has a word processor cover sheet AND a scribe cover sheet attached to it, see point a. above.

d. If you come across a typewritten script without a cover sheet please check with the OCR Special Requirements Team at specialrequirements@ocr.org.uk who can check what access arrangements were agreed.

e. If the script has a transcript, Oral Language Modifier, Sign Language Interpreter or a Practical Assistant cover sheet, award SPaG as normal.

The English Reformation c.1520–c.1550

1. Explain why some people protested against the dissolution of the monasteries.

Assessment Objectives	AO1: Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the key features and characteristics of the periods studied. [5]  AO2: Explain and analyse historical events and periods studied using second order historical concepts. [5]
Additional Guidance	The 'Indicative content' is an example of historically valid content; any other historically valid content is acceptable and should be credited in line with the levels of response. The 'Indicative content' shown is not a full exemplar answer, but exemplifies the sophistication expected at each level. No reward can be given for wider knowledge of the period that remains unrelated to the topic in the question.

One of the main causes of the Pilgrimage of Grace uprising in 1536 was anger over unemployment because many people worked in the religious houses as servants and labourers. Abbeys and monasteries were also a vital part of the local community in the North where they were an important source of help for the poor. As a result, they protested because they believed the dissolution would leave them destitute. Another reason was that people were angry about the destruction to monastic buildings and traditions. People objected to the abbeys being ransacked and torn down, to the removal of precious items, and to the banning of holy days. The lead roofs were seized and sometimes buildings burned down to make it easier to take them. This was one of the sparks for the Lincolnshire Rising as the people of Louth were fearful that their church jewels and spire were about to be confiscated. So some people rose up to protect their treasured buildings. [Note: candidates may choose to focus on causes of specific rebellion or argue in a more general sense as to why the dissolution was opposed: either approach is acceptable.] Nutshell: Two reasons identified and explained.	9–10

2. Study Sources A–C. ‘Priests and churchmen were well respected during the 1520s.’ How far do Sources A–C convince you that this statement is correct? Use the sources and your knowledge to explain your answer.

Assessment Objectives	AO3 (a and b): Analyse, evaluate and use sources (contemporary to the period) to make substantiated judgements in the context of historical events studied [10] AO1: Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the key features and characteristics of the periods studied. [5] AO2: Explain and analyse historical events and periods studied using second order historical concepts. [5]
Additional Guidance	Relevant and effective conclusions can be rewarded within the mark range at Levels 4/5. Answers can still reach Levels 4/5 without a conclusion.  The ‘Indicative content’ is an example of historically valid content; any other historically valid content is acceptable and should be credited in line with the levels of response.  The ‘Indicative content’ shown is not a full exemplar answer, but exemplifies the sophistication expected at each level.  No reward can be given for wider knowledge of the period that remains unrelated to the topic in the question.

Level 5	Level 5 answers will typically explain how the sources support or contradict the statement based on valid and relevant evaluation of two or more sources. Evaluation might consider why such factors such as the purpose, context, provenance or other features of the sources make the source convincing evidence for or against the statement, e.g. Source A does not convince me that this statement is correct. Shelton has asked his executors to find an ‘honest priest of good reputation and name’ to say prayers for his soul, which suggests that he thinks that it might be difficult to find a good priests because there are many bad ones. I think this is fairly typical of the time; we know that people like William Tyndale were also very critical of priests, accusing them of corruption and greed because of practices such as selling indulgences. [Alternatively, candidates might argue that the source supports the statement because Shelton believes there are good/honest priests out there. Candidates may also evaluate using contextual knowledge such as the way that ordinary people donated personal items like bed linen and wedding rings to the Church when they died.] Source B partly convinces me that the statement is true. In the source, Thomas More is defending priests. He acknowledges that they receive lots of criticism, but he points out that this kind of behaviour is not widespread: ‘But when we see just once an evil deed, we stare and tell all we can about it.’ More himself clearly respects the priests, writing that English priests are the best in ‘learning, in honesty, goodness and holiness.’ However, I don’t accept More’s view because he was a senior member of the	17–20

Hall discusses widespread discontent with the church from MPs, who said that priests 'were no longer true men of God'. The MPs complain about several things, including corruption and neglecting the poor. However, we can assume that Hall was part of the reform movement as he was close to Cromwell, so it is unlikely that his account is representative of the whole of parliament or the population at large. Nutshell: Valid use of content of sources with valid evaluation of two or more sources NOTE: Answers which do not make valid use (content OR evaluation) of all three sources should not be awarded more than 18.

Castles: Form and Function c.1000–1750

3. Explain why Kenilworth Castle changed in the 1600s.

The castle was given up by the King in 1642 and it was taken over by Parliament. After the King was imprisoned at the end of the war Parliament was worried about uprisings and ordered that former Royalist castles should be slighted. Kenilworth was one of these as it had belonged to the royal family throughout the early 1600s. The slighting demolished the north-side of the great tower and parts of the outer curtain wall. It was never again going to be used as a defensive structure and main home of a great baron or the King. Another reason it changed was because it was repurposed. The commander John Hawkesworth who had overseen the slighting was then given the castle estate because he and his men hadn't been paid for their work. He made himself a home by extending Leicester's Gatehouse, which was later turned into a farmhouse when he was evicted by Charles II. The rest of the estate was divided up into farms and both Hawkesworth and his men pillaged parts of the main castle for things like fireplaces, windows and other building materials for their own homes and had little interest in what was left. Because of this the castle became a roofless ruin quite quickly. Nutshell: Explains two reasons for changes.	9–10

Source D is useful because it demonstrates the key role the castle played in the King dealing with the rebellion of 1258-66. The King was determined to defeat the rebels at Kenilworth who were holding out against him, so he brought the best available technology to the site, including the huge tower which contained 200 crossbowmen, and nine siege engines as well. He was also prepared to tax people heavily for this siege army, at a time when many barons had already just rebelled. In fact, the siege lasted six months as neither side would give in until eventually the castle starved, which shows just how strong the castle was. On the other hand, Source E is also useful as evidence about Kenilworth. It shows very clearly why the siege engines were needed to enter the castle, as the walls and fortifications were so strong. The castle had already had decades of stone defences added by the time of John, due to its strategic location in the middle of the country and near to powerful barons. . King John added a range of new defences like outer bailey stone walls, and this new gatehouse in them next to the older one. Even after the slighting in the 1600s it did not completely fall down, as shown here.	9–10

The source shows clearly the importance of Kenilworth castle between 1100 and 1300. The King went to considerable expense (£19,000 raised from taxes) for a new army to lay siege to the castle, because it was in the possession of the de Montfort family who had recently rebelled against him, taking other barons with them. The King was not prepared to let the family continue to resist him. After the death of the father Simon de Montfort at the Battle of Evesham, the son attempted to hold out against the King, so Henry III lay siege to the castle, clearly described here. Nutshell: Supported valid inference from one source. NOTE: Answers are likely to address both sources but only make one valid inference	7–8
